CROWLEY CONFESSES

ADMITS THAT HE KILLED DUNLAP CARNIVAL NIGHT.

HIS PLEA IS SELF-DEFENSE.

TELLS THE STORY OF THE PROMIS-CUOUS FIGHTING.

This Is the First Time There Has Been Intimation That It Was Anything but a Very Cold-Blooded, Unprovoked

Disheartened at the evidence being accumulated against him as the slayer of John Dunlap, Frank Crowley made a full confession yesterday to Inspector Halpin and T. A. J. Mastin, assistant prosecuting attorney. He admits the stabbing, but says he did it in self-defense. Crowley's story of the events leading up to the death of Dunlap agrees in every way with that of other witnesses, save that he says he only engaged in one encounter with Dunlap's gang prior to the battle with the fatal end-

Crowley told Inspector Halpin and Mr Mastin that he and Pummell met the Moran gang at Eighth and Main streets, on the hill above Davis' saloon, which fronts on Delaware street. Dunlap had just whipped Moran, and as Crowley and Pummell were acquainted with Moran they joined in with his gang. Later, they met Dunlap in front of Volland's wholesale liquor house. Someone called out "Blondy." and Crowley says the gang started for Dunlap. Crowley reached Dunlap first, and went down from a right hander. He got up, and claims Duniap struck him again but this time with a brick. Dunlap started to run, as the gang was pushing him close. He fell before he had gone two yards, and as he got up, Crowley asserts, he put the knife into him. It had a 21/2 inch blade, and Crowley says he had drawn it after Dunlap struck him the last time.

In answer to a question as to what had become of the knife, Crowley said:

"I threw it in the river."

Crowley was composed during the recital of the story, and seemed satisfied in the genuineness of his claim of self-defense. This theory had not before been advanced by any of the witnesses whom the police have questioned. So far, Crowley is alone in his claim of self-defense. Asked why he didn't make a statement before, Crowley said he thought his gang would keep mum. "But you knew there was a Moran in the gang, didn't you?" asked Inspector Halpin. "Yes, sir," replied Crowley.

"Weil, you might have known we would get the story sooner or later, then."

Crowley had to smile. Crowley said he did not know who cut Jim Moran.

"It's a mistake when it is said that Dunlap was alone. He had a gang with him, and it was some member of it that cut Moran," said Crowley.

"It's a mistake when it is said that Dunlap was alone. He had a gang with him, and it was some member of it that cut Moran." said Crowley.

The inquest was postponed yesterday until Monday because of the absence of certain witnesses. Major Blake L. Woodson has been engaged as Crowley's attorney.

The knife with which Crowley stabbed Dunlap was turned over to the police last night by George Large, one of the proprietors of Large & French's saloon at Independence and Troost avenues. On the morning following the murder Crowley went into Large & French's saloon and got a drink. It was 6:30 a. m. and a copy of The Journal was lying on the bar. Picking up the paper, Crowley read the account of the tragedy of the night previous. The knife and the bloody handserchief with which it had been wiped were in his coat pocket. After finishing the story of the murder of Dunlap, Crowley turned to Large and said as he placed the knife and handkerchief on the bar:

"Here, take these. I will be in the county jail before night."

Large put the things behind the bar and thought no more of the matter until he

Last night Detective Ennis and Officer Boyle went to the saloon and received the knife and handkerchief. The knife is an ordinary pocketlanife with a white handle and two blades, one long one and one short one. Both blades are sharpened to a long, slender point and the long blade resembles to a marked extent the blade of a dagger. It was the one used in cutting Dunlap.

Both the knife and handkerchief are blood covered. Last night, when a reporter saw Crowley he was quite cheerful. He said the confession had taken a load off his mind. He was not at all surprised when he heard the knife and handkerchief had been found.

THAT ALTONTRAIN ROBBERY

PUBLIC CONTINUES A BIT SUSPICIOUS OF THE AFFAIR.

At Any Rate It Occurred at an Oppor tune Time to Be Made Good Use Of in an Important Case.

The Chicago & Alton secret service, assisted by the state, will try to prove in the criminal court this week that Jack Kennedy was the leader of the gang of train robbers that held up a Chicago & Alton train December 23, 1896, and secured a large amount of booty. By a singular coincidence, as pointed out in The Journal wes terday among other things connected with it, another Chicago & Alton train was held up on the very eve of the trial, and the nedy case. It is a very important matter nedy case. It is a very important matter for the detectives to prove that Kennedy is the bold bandit they charge him with being, though their whole case rests upon the story of Jim Flynn, who confesses that he (Flynn) was in the robbery and that Kennedy was the leader. Outside of Flynn's testimony there was very little even circumstantial evidence at the former trial to connect Kennedy with the robbery. He proved a very fair alibi, and, while his witnesses were not all of the highest social standing, there was enough doubt in the minds of eight jurors to make them hold out for acquittal.

There is not the slightest doubt but that the state will take all possible advantage of the latest "holdup," as suspicious as it was from the facts given out, and make eloquent pleas to the jury to put a stop to the "reign of train robbery that is dis-

The Century Company, who are famous for their high class publications, have always stubbornly maintained their prices at correspondingly high figures, this being especially noticeable in the case of the greatest work that ever left their press—The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia. Even in its incomplete form, "The Century," part of which was issued as The Century Dictionary, and another part of which came out as The Cyclopedia of Names, was coveted, perhaps, more than any reference work ever produced, by persons of education and literary tastes; but, unfortunately, its high price, partly justified by its great cost and by its unequaled scholarship, placed it beyond the reach of many appreciative per-Emery, Bird, Thayer & Co. have broken nd the reach of many appreciative per-

When The Century Company recently announced the completion of the work and its issue in ten volumes under the more comprehensive title of The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia, it was a great disappointment to all who had their eye on the work to learn that the publishers intended to maintain the high prices of from eight to differ dollars a volume.

It will therefore be interesting news to many residents of Kansas City and tributary territory to learn that the firm of Emery, Bird, Thayer & Co. have succeeded in making an arrangement whereby 1,000 acceptable persons, who first apply, will become members of a club and each thus secure a set of the complete work at about half the regular prices, and, as The Journal understands, on convenient monthly payments.

DEMOCRATS REJECT THE ANNEXA-TION OF WESTPORT.

LOWER HOUSE DOES THE WORK

POSSIBILITY YET, HOWEVER, OF A SPECIAL ELECTION.

nexing Westport Alone Lost the Resolution - Upper House Unanimously for Annexation.

The lower house of the city council las night killed, after it had been unanimously adopted by the upper house, the resolution providing for publication of the ordinance annexing Westport. It was a question of Westport and adjoining territory could not vision providing for publication will be ignored, depending on another provision of published for thirty days after passage. The talks in the lower house last night, however, indicate that an ordinance annexing Westport will not be passed by that bedy at all.

At the council meeting two reports were submitted by the joint finance committee which met yesterday afternoon to consider the extension mater. The minority report was signed by Aldermen Siddon, Morrison and Brown and Councilman Burrows. It recommended that the upper house refuse to recede from its action in refusing to concur in the extension proposed by the lower house, which places the eastern limit from Eighteenth street north to the middle of the Missouri river at the Big Blue river. The minority report, signed by Councilman Lynch and Pendergast, recommended that

In the upper house the minority repor was taken up first. It was voted down or the proposition to adopt it, Alderman Morgan casting the only affirmative vote. There gan casting the only affirmative vote. Then the majority report was taken up and adopted by the unanimous vote of the ten members of the house, Alderman Johnston at first voting against it, but afterward changing his vote. In the lower house the minority report was adopted, Councilmen Craig and Brinkley voting against it and for the majority report for the majority report.

Knowing that there would be two reports and that there was no prospect of breaking the deadlock while the taking in of territoand that there was no prospect of breaking the deadlock while the taking in of territory outside the corporate limits of Westport was under consideration, Mayor Jones had an ordinance drawn by City Counselor Middlebrook yesterday afternoon limiting the extension to that city, and providing for a special election on December 2. This ordinance, together with an accompanying resolution, directing the city clerk to publish it for three weeks before its final passage in one of the daily papers of Kansas City, was introduced in the upper house. The resolution was unanimously adopted by the members of that house, and upon motion of Alderman Brown the ordinance was read the second time and then sent to the lower house in the custody of the clerk for the information of its members.

The lower house refused by a vote of 5 ayes to 5 nays to adopt the resolution, after a brief discussion.

In the Upper House.

In the Upper House. the upper house Alderman Brown declared that it would be a crime against the people of Kansas City to go to the Big Blue river. He would not vote he said to take in land that could not afford to bear the burden of city taxes.

Alderman Morgan said he would vote for the whole thing. "If this thing fails," he deciared, "the responsibility must be with those who are prejudiced and are standing out for the mayor and his political line."
"To which political party do you belong?"
asked Alderman Seddon, "after riding up and down the streets in the tally-ho with

Bryan?"
"I belong," shouted Alderman Morgan,
"to the party that God Almighty recognizes as fair and just and honest and stands up for American citizenship. Figure that out if you can." you can." Alderman Morrison said that the council Alderman Morrison said that the council should go light upon the subject of taxastion. The time would come when taxes would be high enough. He said that he had gone over the ground carefully and he was not in favor of going to the Blue. The minority report was then defeated and the majority report adopted by the votes previously given, after which the resolution instructing the city clerk to publish the ordinance providing for a special election to annex Westport was unanimously adopted.

The ordinance confining the proposed ex-The ordinance confining the proposed extension to the corporate limits of Westport was then read. Alderman Brown moved that the ordinance be placed upon its second reading and then sent to the lower house for the information of the members of that body, and that it remain in the custody of the clerk while it was away from the upper house. This motion was adopted and the house then took a recess of ten minutes. It failed to reconvene.

In the Lower House. In the lower house the two conference reports were acted upon without debate The majority report was voted down Messrs. Craig and Brinkley voting no. The minority report, in favor of going to the Blue river, was then adopted by a viva voce

The resolution for taking in Westport alone was taken up as soon as it came from the upper house. Mr. Wolf said he did not propose to be made a monkey of by anybody. He said he was a Democrat, and no resolution would have any effect on the member from he was a Democrat, and no resolution would have any effect on the member from the Second ward.

Mr. Lynch said that the annexation of Westport alone would cost the taxpayers $200,000 and take in but $,000 people.

"Why should we burden the people with this debt?" asked Mr. Lynch, "and leave out 12,000 people who have no debts at all? Westport has $135,000 bonded debt, and God only knows how much they have up their sleeves. I am for making Kansas City a first-class city all at once, and not by plecemeal."

Mr. Burrows said the question should not be treated as machine politics, "Westport declared by an overwhelming vote that it wanted to come in," he said. "The argument of assuming indebtedness is a bugbear that we should not consider. I believe that the territory of Westport annexed will have to pay it. But even if we did have to pay it, the revenue would equal the amount. If we cannot agree on the eastern limits we should at least annex Westport."

Mr. Simonds admired the plausibility of eastern limits we should at least annex Westport."

Mr. Simonds admired the plausibility of Mr. Burrows' remarks.
"We understand," said 'Mr. Simonds, "that an ordinance coming from the upper house has no machine politics in it. But the only reason that this resolution is before us is that there is machine politics in it. There is no reason why we should not go to the Blue river. We should legislate for years to come." for years to come."

The resolution was lost by a vote on strict party lines. The five Republicans, Messrs. Smith, Burrows, Brinkley, Hough and Craig voted aye, to take in Westport, and the five Democrats, Messrs. Pendergast, Wolf, Lynch, Simonds and Beroth voted no.

NOT REGARDED AS DEAD YET Counselor Middlebrook Says Those Favoring Annexation Will

"I don't regard the extension project as dead yet," said City Counselor Middlebrook after the adjournment of both houses of the council last night. "We will simply take another tack, which will give us more time, and will be entirely legal, in my opinion and in the opinion of a number of the leading attorneys of the city with whom I have consulted.

"The charter contains conflicting provisons. Section 4 of article 1 provides for exending the limits of the city so as to take ions. Section 4 of article 1 provides for extending the limits of the city so as to take in an incorporated city. This section provides for doing the extending by ordinance, and it was taken from the enabling act and was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court when it knocked out the extension of seven years ago. Section 7 of the same article, which was evidently put into the charter to make section 4 operative, provides that an ordinance providing for a special election to extend the limits of the city must be published for three weeks before its passage by the council and for thirty days after its passage by that body, and that the council must adopt a resolution directing the city clerk to publish it for the three weeks required as a preliminary to its passage.

"Section 43 of article 17 provides that the city limits may be extended by an amendment adopted by a three-fifths vote of the voters of Kansas City voting at a general or special election, and that it must be published in three newspapers for thirty days prior to the election at which it is submitted to the people.

"Now while I held to the opinion that section 4 of article 1, when it was declared null and void by the supreme court also carried section 7 of the same ordinance down with it, and believed that if we complied with the provisions of section 43 of article 17 our extension would be upheld by the supreme court, provided it was a reasonable one, I deemed it advisable to have the ordinance published for three weeks before its passage, as required by section 7 of article 1. But as the time is up in which this might be done we will now go ahead with the ordinance, providing for the extension, ignoring the three weeks' publication provision. This will give us three weeks that we could not have made use of had we followed the original plan."

Ex-City Counselor Frank F. Rozzelle was present at the meeting of the council last night. He was asked if the provision of the charter requiring a three weeks' preliminary publication of the ordinance be ignored and a legal extension of the city limits made.

"Why, certainly it can," he said. "The section of the charter requiring the three weeks' publication of the extension ordinance was knocked out by the supreme court. When that court declared the extension made in 1890 that took in Westport and the territory east of the city to the Big Blue void it annulled the charter provisions under which it was made. Section 4, article 1, provided for taking in an incorporated city by ordinance, and section 7 of the same article defined the manner of procedure. The supreme court declared that the extension of the city limits was an amendment to the city charter and that it could not be done by ordinance. This decision knocked out these two sections of article 1, the last of which provides for three weeks' preliminary publication of the annexation ordinance."

MAYOR CHANGES HIS VIEWS. Frankly Admits That It Is Best to Vote on Westport's Annexation Only. The finance committees of the two houses of the council met yesterday afternoon in joint session and considered the resolution and ordinance providing for a special election to extend the city limits. The upper house committee is composed of Aldermen Seddon, Morrison and Brown, and the lower house committee of Councilmen Lynch, Pendergast and Burrows. After discussing the situation for an hour in open session the situation for an hour in open session the committee retired behind closed doors, where they remained another hour. At the end of that time the doors were opened and they announced that they had been unable to agree. Aldermen Seddon, Morrison and Brown, and Councilman Burrows decided to stand by the action of the upper house in limiting the proposed extension on the south to Forty-seventh street and east to Fairview avenue, and Councilman Lynch still insisted that the eastern limits of the Greater Kansas City should be at the Big Blue river, from Eighteenth street north to the middle of the Missouri river.

Eighteenth street north to the middle of the Missouri river.

Before the committee went into joint executive session Mayor Jones made a speech in which he said he would approve any reasonable extension that they might agree upon, but if they failed to agree he would have an ordinance introduced in the council limiting the extension to the territory included in the corporate limits of Westport.

cluded in the corporate limits of Westport.

Discussing the council deadlock, after the adjournment of the joint meeting of the committees, Mayor Jones said: "After giving the matter a great deal of thought, I have arrived at the conclusion that it is better to take in only Westport at the special election to be held for the purpose of extending the city limits. By limiting the extension to Westport we will avoid litigation, as the people of that city and its officials complied with all the legal requirements in regard to extension. If we go ahead and take in other territory, the extension will surely be contested, and nothing can be done in Westport or any other new territory in the way of collecting taxes or special tax bills there, should any streets be graded or paved, or sidewalks laid or other improvements be made. While the taking in of Westport would be perfectly legal, and would be so acknowledged by everyone, still the questioning of the legality of extending the city limits over that territory to the south or east of the present city limits would tie that city up the same as other territory would be tied up. In the meantime Kansas City would be compelled to pay the interest upon Westport's bonded indebtedness and would be unable to reimburse itself by collecting taxes in that city. Should the extension be declared illegal by the supreme court, Westport would be knocked out as well as the other territory, this can be done at the general municipal election to be held next April. In the meantime we can make sure of Westport and give its citizens an opportunity to register and vote for members of the city council. If another extension is made at the city election next spring, we can provide for giving representation to the people in the territory then taken in by the changing the boundary lines of some of the wards now in the city."

Fight for Custody of a Child. The divorce suit of Calvin Johnson against Leona Johnson was tried Tuesday last in the circuit court at Independence, and the defendant was granted a divorce on her cross bill. Yesterday a motion for a new trial was made by the plaintiff, who seeks custody of the child. The motion set out various errors of the court. Attorney Dryden stated yesterday that unless a new trial was granted the defendant will appeal from the decision of Judge Gates.

In Judge Gates' division of the circuit court at Independence three divorces were granted yesterday. In the case of R. A. Lindsey against Carrie A. Lindsey the plaintiff was given a decree, Martha Schepper was granted a divorce from Henry Schepper on the grounds of desertion. Maggie McComas was given a decree of divorce from Charles McComas, who was charged with having a mania for gambling.
